

Geography 464
EUROPE TODAY:
Global, Transnational, and Immigrant Europe

Professor John Pickles
204 Carolina Hall. T,TR 11:00am-12:15pm
Email: jpickles@unc.edu

The course is an upper division undergraduate and graduate course focused on the processes and patterns of transnational and global Europe, and the ways in which these historical and geographical processes and patterns are reshaping everyday lives, economies, and places across the continent. In developing an understanding of Europe Today, this course will focus on the diverse and shifting geographies of Europe, including the legacies of Empires; expansion and consolidation of the European Union; a 'borderless' Europe versus 'Fortress Europe'; post-socialism and post-fascism in Central and Southern Europe; economic globalization; and post-colonial immigration.